An exciting and innovative workshop for students, Making Friends with Your Body, being held in person on March 22nd at 4:30 pm in Mitchell Hall room 126. We know that because of trauma, structural inequities, and societal expectations, feeling bad in our bodies has become far too common. Space is limited. Pre-registration is required. Students can register by emailing svpreducation@queensu.ca.

WORKSHOP FOR STUDENTS

Making Friends with your Body

Can you remember the first time you felt bad about your body? For many, the battle began so long ago that they can scarcely remember ever feeling good. For others, a specific comment or experience forever changed their feelings about their body.

In this interactive workshop, we'll discuss the "cultural virus" of body hatred: common causes, the impact on day-to-day life (intimacy, eating, presence, and joy!) and steps you can take to begin the process of making friends with your body, once again.
